1- The naming:

The name NULL just came by accident when we were arguing about what should we make the name of our group. After 2 days of simply going back and forth about which name sounded better or was written better we came to a stalemate. Then, out of nowhere, Mokhtari said that we should make it "null" because we were arguing too much, and it would make sense, since we couldn't decide, to make it "Group_Name = null".

2- The logo:

After deciding on "null", we agreed that I would make it, and so I did. I used a Black background and White text to represent the binary system; the 1 and 0 of colors. I made the letters all CAPITAL to attract attention and to look nice. I also used the brackets "[" , "]" because I like programming and it makes it look like we're professionals. But it still felt incomplete somehow. At that time, I asked advice from friends and family about what should I do to make it better, and one of my friends said "why dont you mirror half of the letters like some big corporations?", so I did as they said and it turned out perfect. And that's how it looks now.
